DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

2. Claims 1-14 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Silver (U.S. Patent No. 6,240,174).

Regarding claim 1, Silver teaches a method for updating subscriber-related data records, which are stored locally in a number of service devices in a switching network, comprising:

providing administrative measures, for each data record which is stored in one of the service devices, to store a list of the addresses of the other service devices which store the data record (column 7, line 35 through column 8, line 8), and addressing each data record in a standard manner throughout the network, wherein a change to the data record is carried out on one of the service devices which stores the corresponding data record, and the service device reports the change throughout the network to the other service devices (column 8, lines 55-67).

Art. Unit: 2642

Regarding claim 2, Silver further teaches the method wherein the service devices are included in the peripherals of a communications system (Fig. 4, 405, 415, 425).

Regarding claim 3, Silver further teaches the method wherein the service devices are included in the network nodes of a switching network (Fig. 2).

Regarding claim 4, Silver further teaches the method wherein the lists are updated in the course of administration of the switching network or of the communications system (column 7, lines 2-22).

Regarding claim 5, Silver further teaches the method wherein an old data record is stored until the initiation of the network-wide or switching-center-wide updating by the customer (column 6, lines 35-44).

Regarding claim 6, Silver further teaches the method wherein the data record is updated by the service devices which initially have a new data record during a background process for successive updating of the other service devices (column 8, lines 9-32).

Regarding claim 7, Silver further teaches the method wherein repeated cyclic updating attempts are performed in the background process if the service devices to be updated are inaccessible or the attempts are unsuccessful (column 6, lines 56-65).

Regarding claim 8, it is inherent that the method comprising utilizing connections which have been made temporarily between the service devices in order to update the data records because these updates would not last forever.

Regarding claim 9, Silver further teaches the method wherein an update-specific communication occurs between the service devices via a switching-center-internal message distribution system or, throughout the network, via ISDN user-to-user signaling, or switching-center internally and throughout the network via the Internet Protocol (column 3, lines 29-37 and column 6, lines 54-55).

Regarding claim 10, Silver further teaches the method wherein a number of data records are updated via one updating connection (column 8, lines 29-32).

Regarding claim 11, Silver further teaches the method wherein the updating format is defined in the course of the communication between the service devices (column 8, lines 32-54).

Regarding claim 12, Silver further teaches the method wherein the time required for updating is reduced by multiple channel connection and/or multiple starting of the background process (column 8, lines 9-32).

Regarding claim 13, Silver further teaches the method further comprising updating a time stamp to the update to prevent the current data record from being overwritten by older data records when a number of updating background processes are carried out at the same time (column 8, lines 9-32).

Regarding claim 14, Silver further teaches the method wherein activation of the background processes of service devices which are still in operation is carried out to update service devices which are being taken back into operation again after repair (column 8, lines 9-32).
